

WILD FOWL ABOUND IN NEARBY WATERS

Gunners on Long Island and in Connecticut Bringing In Large Bags.

FEDERAL LAW GOVERNS State Statutes in Regard to Open Season Superseded by U. S. Regulations.

The first flight of ducks is now in the bays and coves of Long Island, and sportsmen are coming in with bags of ducks, any number of geese, a few teal and a few geese.

In fact, some gunners on the opening day, between Massapequa and Freeport, brought in more than the usual number of ducks, the law giving the sportsman the privilege of taking only twenty-five, all species being included. When two or more men are hunting from the same boat, bird or battery, the limit is stretched to forty. But the men who have taken over the limit have been few, for as a general thing the duck laws are observed on Long Island.

The largest bag of ducks brought to this city was taken by George Lander, who hunted in the Connecticut waters and brought back as a result of the day's shooting seventy-six black ducks. These ducks were taken by point shooting, battery shooting not being included in it to any extent yet because of the warm weather. Gunners on Long Island are bringing in shell-drakes, broadbills, coots, old squaws, pintails and black ducks. Benjamin Molitor, spokesman of Long Beach, reports a black duck and over a dozen other birds, and among the shore birds visiting the flats are shorebirds and yellow-legs.

Some bags made in Shinnecock Bay, which show the average bags, were brought in by two New York sportsmen. Their bags included ten geese, several teal ducks and coots.

Bay Alive With Fowl.

J. A. Penny, an old time sportsman of Good Ground, L. I., says that Shinnecock Bay for the month of October has been literally alive with geese and ducks. In fact, he says, "Never before in the history of this section has such an abundance of wild fowl been known to remain feeding on these waters for such a long period."

W. H. Cook of New York and Walter Penny of Good Ground in several hours bagged 19 geese, 15 teal, 12 redheads and many coots. Great South Bay, H. Emonds of Brookville and John Ravizza of Coney Island in the salt-bay, Ravizza, from Amityville, in three days bagged 2 redheads, 3 black ducks, 21 broadbills and 1 snipe. Their bag was not larger because of stormy weather.

One can get ducks close to the city or far from the city, according to one's inclination and pocketbook. A few ducks can be picked up in Jamaica Bay and if shooting were permitted within the city limits one could get a bag within the 5 cent trolley fare limit. For many ducks, driven out of Great South Bay by the constant gunning since the first day of October, have discovered that they are free from molestation in Sheephead Bay. Any morning before dawn and about daybreak the black ducks can be seen in light there.

The other bays on Long Island that now contain ducks are: Harbor, Middle Bay, East Bay, South Bay, Great South Bay, Moriches Bay, Shinnecock Bay and Nevers Bay.

Where to go to Hunt.

The stations to go to to get wild waterfowl are Bay Shore, Bayport, Bellport, Blue Point, Centre Moriches, East Quogue, Freeport, Good Ground, Katonah, Sayville, Wading River and West Hampton.

In New Jersey the best place is Barnegat Bay, from Forked River down to Atlantic City. Barnegat Bay extends, however, is later than Long Island. The place to go in Jersey is Barnegat Bay, head, Beech Haven, Forked River, Harvey Cedars and Lavallette.

Among gunners there is some misunderstanding as to the migratory shore bird and water fowl law. A Federal law has been enacted which superseded all State laws in the way of open season. The country has been divided into two zones by the Federal Government. New York, Long Island and New Jersey have different open seasons under the Federal act, however.

In New York State, not including Long Island, the open season on brant, wild duck, geese and swan, from September 15 to December 15. Long Island from October 1 to January 15, and New Jersey from November 1 to January 31. The season is closed in New York and New Jersey on woodcock, snipe, quail and all closed season on all migratory game from sunset to sunrise.

The Federal Government has not, however, made specific regulations as to the bag limit and the State laws will apply this season. Also the State laws will apply as to the method of taking all wild fowl.

The New Jersey Law.

If one wants to hunt in New Jersey he should be familiar with the New Jersey wild fowl law, which says:

License for non-resident or alien, $1.50; resident citizen, $1.15. License to be obtained from any county clerk or town clerk, not required, however, from the owner or lessee of farm land hunting on land on which he resides. The limit is twenty ducks, ten each of geese and brant a day. The open season is already stated, is from November 1 to January 31, both inclusive.

It is unlawful for any person hunting or gunning after geese, duck, swan, brant or other water wild fowl to place the boat, sinkbox or other vessel or construction in which such person may be in wait at a distance of more than one hundred feet from any shore, bank, river, creek, bay or braced stream not covered with water, and it is unlawful for any person or persons to hunt after or pursue the same in any manner except between sunrise and sunset.

It is unlawful for any person to pursue any geese, duck, swan, brant, or any kind of water wild fowl whatsoever, or to shoot, or to shoot at, or kill, or wound the same from any boat or vessel propelled by any means other than by oars or paddles, or from any sandbar not covered with water, or from any boat, vessel or other structure anchored or staked upon any waters of any of the bays, sounds, coves, ponds, rivers, creeks, or streams of the State at a greater distance than one hundred feet from ice, marsh or meadow, bar or bank, or heaped seaweed not covered with water for the purpose of laying, setting or baiting any goose, duck, swan, brant or any other kind of wild waterfowl.

Regulations for Long Island. The Long Island duck law names these stipulations: License fee, non-resident or alien, $2.00; resident, $1.10; non-resident tax-
